Anderson High School has been shortlisted for a prestigious award by using a range of Johnstone's Trade products

The £55.75 million development, which used a number of Johnstone's Trade products has been shortlisted in the Best Education Project category at the 2016 Partnership Awards. The project was undertaken by Morrison Construction on behalf of hub North Scotland and Shetland Islands Council.

Nodram decorators used the high performance Acrylic Durable Eggshell in off-white for the main wall areas and also for the striking colours required for the feature walls. The product was not just specified for its aesthetic qualities, but also for its excellent durability and washable properties, making them ideal for use in a busy school environment and other areas such as kitchens and bathrooms.

Other products that were specified for the project included Johnstone's Covaplus Vinyl Matt on the ceilings, providing a durable finish that is resistant to fading. The doors, frames and skirting boards of the new school was covered with Johnstone's Aqua Gloss in grey and orange to give a traditional gloss look with the added advantage of being quick drying and low odour during application.

Nodram decorators approached Johnstone's Trade asking for technical advice on product compatibility. The school required a robust, durable finish, as well as a bold colour scheme to help create a visually appealing and inspiring space for the pupils. Johnstone's Trade are proud to provide paint for educational projects, knowing that we can encourage students learning, but also by enhancing the ways in which we can use our products, expertise of colour and design to meet the needs of the busy school environment.

Anderson, the largest school in Lerwick, Shetland was a replacement catering a maximum of 1,180 students. It includes new science labs, upgraded security and technology, a multipurpose space on the school's east side, installation of air conditioning which the building did not previously have, improved learning spaces and handicap-accessibility features.

David Grainger, Specification Development Manager at PPG, said: "We worked closely with our clients, Ryder Architects, Morrison Construction and Nodram Decorators, to ensure that the materials were delivered to site in a timely and efficient manner which required co-ordination between all clients and the decorating centres in Aberdeen and Inverness, as well as Edinburgh."
